

Financial Times European Business Schools Ranking: EDHEC rises through the ranks of Europe's top 15 schools

Press release

Paris, 7 December 2020 – For a fifth consecutive year, EDHEC Business School has ranked among the 15 best-performing and most desirable business schools in Europe, according to the Financial Times ranking of European business schools, published today.<sup>1</sup> The 2020 ranking concludes a year in which the School has risen through the international rankings, placing it among the best educational programmes in the world.

EDHEC ranks 14th overall in the latest Financial Times European Business Schools Ranking, up one place from 2019. The School's performance is the culmination of its sustained and consistent progress over the past 10 years and fully reflected in the individual Financial Times 2020 rankings for Masters in Management, MBA, EMBA and Executive Education (custom and open programmes).

The ranking acknowledges the quality and selectivity of EDHEC's programmes and reaffirms its leadership alongside prestigious schools and universities such as London Business School, HEC Paris, Oxford Saïd and Bocconi University.

This 14th place underpins EDHEC Business School's position as a centre of excellence that guarantees the international success of its graduates through a varied offering of programmes that align with their convictions and ensure their personal and professional development.

EDHEC's continued rise through the international rankings makes its portfolio of programmes one of the best in the world:
